The same artist at Herend has revisited the blank canvas of the dragon numerous times and, with each approach, creates a striking new piece. A fitting fascination one could say for the highest ranking animal in Chinese mythology. This time he looked to the Ming Dynasty and its signature blue and white color scheme for inspiration. He also incorporated a stylized lotus flower which is a common motif in Chinese decorative arts. The revered flower represents purity since it rises untainted from the dirty depths of mud to bloom in beauty.
